

Manuel Wipf

Chief Executive Officer, REMAYA

Manuel Wipf is the Chief Executive Officer at REMAYA.

Manuel is a defence specialist and former member of the Swiss Army, with nearly three decades worth of international experience across the USA, Europe, Asia and the Middle East. His capabilities have played a key role in establishing REMAYA as a leading entity in the local shooting and defence training industry and have led to the successful foundation of multiple defence organisations across the world.

In his role as Chief Executive Officer, Manuel oversees several critical functions and departments across the company and is committed to developing its core competencies while maximising avenues for commercial success.

Prior to his appointment in 2018, Manuel served as Acting General Manager and Director of Strategy for REMAYA at Tawazun Holdings and was CEO and Member of the Board at Swiss consulting firm Dualtrust. He also headed the stock exchange department at Bank SG Warburg Securities before founding and leading defence consultancy Degama, which involved working with multinational law enforcement teams and special units to develop shooting ranges and training practices.

His accreditations include Swiss Army defence and combat training, along with IPSC-approved tactical shooting, range safety and operations management. Manuel has also organised several defence and business-focused workshops for leading institutions, including the USA's National Rifle Association (NRA).

Manuel Wipf obtains a master's from the Swiss Business School for Economics and holds a bachelor's degree in Microeconomics from the University of California, Davis, USA.
